

has been reordered according to different speculative interests, generally alien to its original motives - it is therefore displaced. And even the fact that Fichte, a German-speaking author from the 18th and 19th century, is being discussed today in America, in Brazil, does not fail to signify a certain displacement, the understanding of which is our task - and with this last aspect we intend to continue the very rich discussions that took place at our last congress in Buenos Aires, whose theme was precisely “Fichte in the Americas”. But, finally, one has to ask whether “displacement” isn’t a systematic motif of the doctrine of science itself, designating a mechanism that constitutes all human knowledge in general, that of the passage - or displacement - from the supersensible to the sensible. The Congress will also be the occasion for a tribute to Rubens Rodrigues Torres Filho, a pioneer in studies on Fichte and classical German philosophy in Brazil, who left us at the end of 2023.

It is with joy, then, that the 7th ALEF Congress invites everyone to communicate the results of their research and enrich the understanding of Fichtian thought and classical German philosophy in general.
